Room for One More

A colouring adventure with Kin

Welcome to the Kin crew

Meet Kin, the indigo otter. He loves little adventures, good snacks, and making room for a new friend.

Grab your favourite colours and join the picnic. There is no right colour for kindness. Make this book your own.

Three little things to try

Wave hello.

Ask someone what they would like.

Make room for one more.

My favourite way to be kind is...

Room for One More

A colouring adventure with Kin

This book belongs to: _____

A very good plan

Kin packs a picnic. He even saves some snacks.
Well... most of them.

A new face

Rabbit is not sure where to sit.
Kin notices and gives a little wave.

Want some company?

Kin sits beside Rabbit. There is no rush.
They watch a butterfly together.

A helping paw

The basket is heavy. Kin asks for a paw.
Rabbit is happy to help.

Make a little room

Here comes Turtle! Kin spreads out the blanket.

"There is room for one more."

Better together

A snack, a smile, a place beside a friend.
Everyone has something to share.

There is room for you

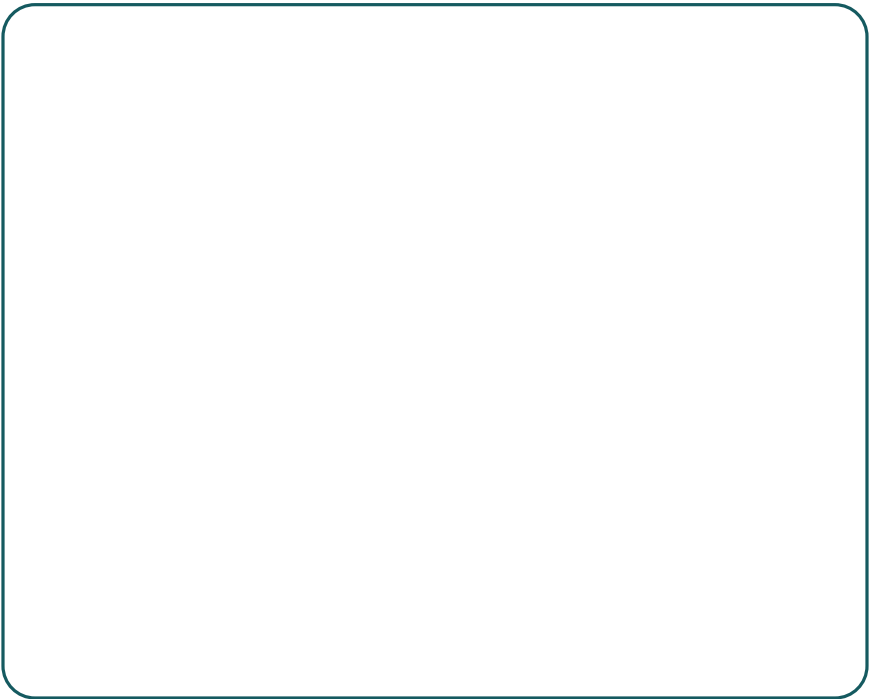

Draw yourself on the blanket with Kin and friends.
You belong here.

Your next little adventure

Kin learned that everyone can offer a little kindness.
What could you do today?

Draw yourself giving someone a helping paw.

Small paws. Room for one more.

Keep your people close.

Meet Kin.

A little different. A lot of heart.

Most otters are brown. Kin is indigo. He thinks that is a perfectly good colour for an otter.

Kin takes the scenic route, collects stones that look like faces, and sometimes slides down the riverbank before checking what is at the bottom. Usually mud. Once, somebody's lunch.

His ideas can be a little unexpected. So can his way of doing things. But Kin has a knack for noticing the friend standing just outside the fun. "Want some company?"

He might offer a paw, make a little room, or invite them along on a wonderfully unnecessary adventure. And when Kin needs help, his friends are there for him, too.

At Next to Kin, we believe everyone deserves that feeling: being noticed, included, and connected to their people.

That is where KinTags come in. A tap with a compatible phone opens the contact information a family has chosen to share, helping someone know who to call. No app. No battery. No tracking.

Kin brings his own colour to the world - and makes room for yours.

See. Pause. Tap.
